

ROUGH RIDER HIS PARTY'S CHOICE WITH M'KINLEY.

CONVENTION
THE MAGNET

Never Has Philadelphia
Seen Such a Jam of People.

(Special to The Evening World.)
PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 18.—The city of William Penn is throbbing this morning with an infusion of new, hot blood, which will cause her to do a political rag-time for the next three days, when she will sink back exhausted from the effort and vow never to do it again. The big crowds began to arrive this morning from all points, loyal legionaries keen with the love of conquest and spoils, and all pledged to one man.

Philadelphia has never seen such a gathering before as this; this great army that overflows the hotels and congests the streets, speaking in many dialects, differing in dress, but one in the intensity of their thirst and their acceptance of William McKinley, who is such an absolute certainty that, in the changing, shifting mass of men, whose talk make the headquarters in the Walton hum like a beehive, no mention of his name is heard.

There is a name, however, that is heard and will not down. Each squadron that comes trooping into the city has uttered it.

It is heard on the streets, the corridors of headquarters and all other points; in private boarding-houses, where visitors are crowded three and four in a room; in the bar-rooms, where the talk and speculation are most abundant. The city is vibrating with the sounds that came from that of all others.

The name is Roosevelt.

On the Governor's arrival Saturday night he declared that his Vice-Presidential boom was "A dead cock in the pit."

But it is possible even then that the governor might be mistaken, though when he made the declaration his teeth snapped as if he had finally bitten off the matter.

"This man Roosevelt has got mind and stamina," said a Missouri delegate, "and he's a buckin' broncho." But in the congress of political plainness there are one or two who are without pearls as broncho busters, and who, besides the rough, strenuous skill requisite for the job, also have the gentle craft and subtlety of the gentlemen who were high in the political "push" when Machiavelli and a few others did business.

Roosevelt almost sure.

And this morning it is almost sure that Roosevelt will be the man of the hour, despite himself. He will likely be convinced, if he has not already been, that it is a dangerous thing to fool with lightning, and so far as his case is concerned the best thing for him to do is to stop dodging and let it strike him. Then he will escape unhurt.

Senator Platt and Senator Hanna will hold a long conference today at which something may drop. That the matter to which most attention will be given, the rough rider chief, is a foregone conclusion. Whether the New York delegation will present his name is uncertain, but it is possible that some Westerner may rise and shout the name of Roosevelt, and in the cyclone that follows all the houses of hope that Bliss, Woodruff, Scott, Dolliver and others have occupied will go down in a woeful collapse. And this is just what will probably happen.

When Hanna and Platt meet to-day there will be some fine maneuvering, the details of which would make very interesting reading. Hanna dominates the whole gathering with the strong, sure hand of an animal tamer, who knows from experience that that is the only efficacious method and that any lapse of vigilance may cost him his life.

HANNA THE BUSIEST MAN.

Chairman Hanna is the busiest man in the town, yet has had time to exchange friendly notes with Mr. Platt. Communications, it is said, that breathe the perfume of amity and good will, but that is all guile and neither is deceived. Platt knows that Mr. Hanna has a sandbag behind his back, and the Ohio Senator has declared that Mr. Platt is never without a knife, which he figured in some beautiful case of evasion. In the name of that is being played these two men, so strongly contrasted, stand out boldly.

Hanna is the physical embodiment of the Boer, cold, alert, unscrupulous, with the strength to crush and rend where other means fail—the typification of force. If fate had so shaped his destiny that he was a prize fighter he would have had Jeffries wallop to a standstill long ago.

Platt has been likened to a fox and that of astute animal he has all the craft, but, coupled to this, he possesses also the courage and equipment of a tiger. His claws are sharp and cruel, as more than one of the politically maimed can testify. He is soft, gentle, but shifty. One to look into his mild eyes and hear the mild tone of his voice would imagine him to be a Methodist elder.

When these masters in craft meet there is no foretelling what the outcome may be.

Judging from the pulse of the lobby this morning it appeared that Roosevelt might have a show to bolt the convention for first place. That chance, says the experts, is remote, though they admit it is not impossible. Such a thing might come to pass were it given the initial impetus by the combined power of Quay and Platt, supplemented by the Massachusetts men, led by Henry Cabot Lodge, who is a friend and admirer of Roosevelt.

HANNA ACCUSED PLATT OF A PLOT.

What Happened at Historic Conference at Griscom's Palace.

(Special to The Evening World.)
PHILADELPHIA, June 18.—The historic conference which was held at the palatial residence of Clement E. Griscom, the millionaire railroad and steamship magnate, did not break up until 2 o'clock this morning.

Those who took part in the conference were Senator Hanna, Senator Dewey, Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts; Senator Fairbanks, of Indiana; Congressman Dolliver, of Iowa; Gen. Grosvenor, of Ohio; Senator Keane, of New Jersey; and Postmaster-General Charles Emory Smith. They all slept at Mr. Griscom's residence.

It was 10 o'clock this morning before any of the conferees returned to their hotels. Hanna looked worried and tired when he entered the Walton. All he would say was that the platform had been discussed and put into shape.

He refused to be interviewed on the Vice-Presidential question. The mention of Roosevelt's name to him caused a frown to sweep over his broad face.

Dewey said that the platform occupied most of the time of the Millionaire Griscom's guests. He admitted, however, that the nomination of Roosevelt for the Vice-Presidency came up for consideration.

"We had two candidates for the nomination at the evening prayer meeting," remarked Dewey, "Fairbanks, of Indiana, and Dolliver, of Iowa."

"Was there much opposition to Roosevelt's nomination?" Dewey was asked.

"Now please excuse me," replied Dewey, as he slipped into the elevator.

It is said on the best authority that Hanna expressed himself in strong terms at the conference against the nomination of Roosevelt as McKinley's running mate. He charged Platt and Quay with being responsible for the attempt to force Roosevelt's nomination.

He went so far as to charge that it was spite and mischief making that was behind Platt and Quay's great interest in Roosevelt.

Hanna admitted that he might be powerless to prevent Roosevelt's nomination, although Roosevelt had appealed to him to stop it.

Senator Foraker had been invited to the conference, but declined to attend on a plea of illness, which was only a disguise for his chagrin at being turned down as Chairman of the Platform Committee in favor of Senator Fairbanks.

The latter read the resolutions as they had been drafted by Postmaster-General Smith and approved by President McKinley.

The preamble will call attention to the laws passed by Congress in fulfillment of the promises made at the St. Louis Convention.

No reference is made to bi-metalism as was done in 1896, but there is a clear and distinct declaration for the maintenance of the gold standard.

The usual declaration in favor of a protective tariff is prominent. Regarding trusts, the platform will declare in favor of the right of capital to combine for industrial purposes, but conspiracies in the restraint of trade and limitation of prices will be condemned.

The plank on the Philippines will be taken almost verbatim from the President's message, promising the restoration of order and the granting of local self-government as soon as the inhabitants are ready to receive the privilege.

The Administration's policy with regard to the Philippines, Cuba, Porto Rico and Hawaii will be strongly indorsed.

There will be words of praise for the President's course toward the Boers. Special stress will be laid on the fact that the United States has been the only nation to offer mediation between warring powers.

There will be a declaration for the Isthmian rather than the Nicaragua Canal. Legislation for the restoration of the merchant marine and the ship subsidy bill will be indorsed.

No reference has been prepared to the present critical condition in China.

30,000 TO PARADE.

Allied Republican Clubs to Turn
Out in Force at Philadelphia
To-Night.

(Special to The Evening World.)
PHILADELPHIA, June 18.—Philadelphia will wake up to-night and give a big parade in honor of its visitors. Music and fireworks, an electrical illumination and a display of flags and bunting will make things lively along the route.

Thirty thousand men will be in line. The pageant will be made up of the allied Republican clubs of Philadelphia and vicinity and visiting organizations. Seventy-five organizations will be represented.

The paraders will be in uniform and great rivalry exists among them to be led by the finest bands that money can buy. The parade will start at 8 o'clock and will end at 11 o'clock.

The parade will be held on the city streets and will be a great success.

DOLLIVER WILL FIGHT TO A FINISH

(Special to The Evening World.)
PHILADELPHIA, June 18.—In connection with the stamped for Roosevelt some signed statements are published to-day which indicate that it has developed considerable feeling.

Gen. Grosvenor, who is regarded as the mouthpiece of the Administration on the floor of the House of Representatives, and who is the father of the Dolliver boom, says:

"There are rumors to the effect that because the Administration is not anxious for the nomination of Gov. Roosevelt certain persons, feeling some grievance against the Administration, are organizing, or attempting to organize, to force Roosevelt on the ticket. That this can be done successfully without the consent and concurrence of Roosevelt no man believes."

"That Roosevelt in this way is playing the part which involves duplicity nobody is heard to assert. That there is a deep purpose to drive Roosevelt from the campaign for Governor in New York everybody knows."

"It may be that those of us who live until Thursday will witness one of the liveliest fights in many a year. It will not be conceded that men like Long, Dolliver, Scott, Fairbanks and some others can be brushed aside by the mere will of a dictator, and a great convention stamped to aid in fighting out the Governor to decline."

Representative Dolliver's friends insist that he will not be stampeded from the race. They declare he will remain until the finish. Despite these statements, however, the feeling at this time is that Gov. Roosevelt, under political signs should fall to an unusual degree, will be the running mate of Mr. McKinley.

The Dolliver people say that they had assurance from Gov. Roosevelt that he would tell them what his intentions were and that they had as yet received no word from him to the effect that he would not take the place.

Beside Young and Roberts the other parties to the conference were to be Prof. Albert G. Shaw and Prof. Butler of Columbia College. Both of these gentlemen are warm personal friends of Gov. Roosevelt, and are strongly of the opinion that he should not take the nomination for Vice-President.

They have not revealed to him to do the honor if the convention attempts to thrust it upon him, and the Roosevelt people are placing great reliance in the ability of these men to induce the Governor to decline.

The paraders, divided into eight divisions, will pass around the City Hall, where they will be reviewed by the State and City officials and guests of national prominence. Throughout the city, particularly along the line of march, the display of flags and bunting is elaborate.

Correspondence Paper.

High-Grade Correspondence Paper

at One-fourth Usual Prices.

We have bought from the Whiting Paper Co. about 10,000 boxes of Correspondence Paper at less than quarter of the usual price. The reason for this extraordinary price concession is the fact that the boxes were slightly discolored or soiled, but the paper is in perfect condition. The boxes were damaged in the New York Warehouse, and to ship them back to the mill for reboxing and rebanding would have been an expensive matter, besides the labor and inconvenience attendant upon such a transaction. The immediate disposal of such a large lot was another factor that prompted the manufacturers to accept our offer.

For convenient choosing we have made 3 lots.
